

SILENCE OF THE NIGHT

Kent Parker

The silence of the night fills the air. The empty sounds completely cover me.
But through the din of darkness, I can hear whispers of your love that set me free.
In darkness of the night, when I am lost, a soft light casts a path into the sky.
In empty darkness, I can see the way your love shines, guiding me to fly.

The silence of the night, it never ends.
But I'm all right, because I know you'll always be near, calling out to me.
And if I lose my way, I have no fear... I hear you in the silence of the night.

It's lonely in the silence of the night. Absence is my only company.
A serenade of stillness and despair, alone with this lonely symphony.
In the quiet, I listen for a sound. A single note of hope is all I need.
A beacon to guide me back to you, I hear your voice, calling out to me.

The silence of the night, it never ends.
But I'm all right, because I know you'll always be near, calling out to me.
And if I lose my way, I have no fear... I hear you in the silence of the night.

< instrumental – string and mandolin solo >

The silence of the night, it never ends.
But I'm all right, because I know you'll always be near, calling out to me.
And if I lose my way, I have no fear... I hear you in the silence of the night.

It's lonely in the silence of the night, but I hear you in the silence of the night.
When absence is my only company, I hear your voice calling out to me.
Whispers of your love set me free.
